

A Brand New End: Survival and Its Pictures Bus Shelter Map

Posters by Carmen Winant sited in bus shelters across the City of Philadelphia, concurrent with the exhibition at The Print Center, bring the space between Winant's art and the information shared by organization like WIT and NCADV even closer together. Modeled after public service announcements, the posters feature restaged photographs of t-shirts from WIT's archive created as part of The Clothesline Project, a world-wide initiative started in the 1990s to address violence against women. T-shirts are decorated, then hung in a public place, acting as a testimony to experiences. These posters raise awareness of issues around domestic violence, relay information about services and support, and according to Winant, "give voice to the archive from survivors."

There are twelve distinct posters on view throughout Philadelphia. Additional locations will also be added, so keep an eye out!

From April 11

- 8th and Market Streets
- 20th and Chestnut Streets
- Frankford Avenue and Bridge Street
- 33rd and Dauphin Streets
- 47th and Spruce Streets

From May 9

- 16th and Chestnut Streets
- B Street and Erie Avenue
- Broad and Dauphin Streets
- 19th Street and Passyunk Avenue
- 63rd and Walnut Streets

From June 6

- 7th and Arch Streets
- 22nd Street and Lehigh Avenue
- 20th Street and Oregon Avenue
- 54th and Berks Streets
- 5th and Market Streets

