

ARTS & CULTURE

See how Philly museums and arts organizations are celebrating America's 250th

Philly museums and other arts organizations have a slew of exhibits planned around America 250.

From "Wings and Water: The Space Between," at Cherry Street Pier.
Delaware River Waterfront Corporation

by Allison Weiss Brady, For The Inquirer
Published June 25, 2026, 5:00 a.m. ET

No city does history quite like Philadelphia — and it's all on full display this summer for the nation's 250th. From museums and historic houses to outdoor experiences and more, here are some must-dos over the coming days, weeks, and months.

...

‘America Today: Voices in Contemporary Print’

The Print Center

Explore the current state of democracy through contemporary printmaking from 38 artists. This free exhibition was inspired by the New Deal of the 1930s and 1940s, when printmaking was used for political commentary. View works from generations of artists who use printmaking as an art form to explore and express the issues we face today.

1614 Latimer St., now through July 25, printcenter.org/100/america-today/

...

Full Article: See how Philly museums and arts organizations are celebrating America’s 250th