

UWISHUNU Article

All New for 2026: The Greatest Exhibitions in Greater Philadelphia

Celebrate the Semiquincentennial with groundbreaking limited-time collections and displays ...

The Declaration's Journey at the Museum of the American Revolution – Photo courtesy Museum of the American Revolution

By Lori Litchman and Jovan Ellis Published on June 16, 2026

SHARE

The city's year-long Semiquincentennial celebration offers an opportunity for institutions across Greater Philadelphia and The Countryside to curate massive exhibitions to share with residents and visitors alike.

Art on view includes: A Nation of Artists, a dual-museum exhibition between the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts; ArtPhilly's five-week-long What Now festival; and a scavenger-hunt worthy series of Bells Across PA. The Franklin Institute's latest exhibit takes visitors on an immersive tour through how theme parks come to life, while The Academy of Natural Sciences re-examines its Lewis and Clark collection through an Indigenous lens.

History takes center stage across the region — including the Independence Seaport Museum's look at how our nascent country sought profit and power — and the Museum of the American Revolution's in-depth examination of the Declaration of Independence.

Check out this guide to the biggest exhibitions on view in 2026.

...

America Today: Voices in Contemporary Print at The Print Center

April 24 - July 25, 2026

The Print Center presents America Today: Voices in Contemporary Print, an exhibition showcasing the works of 37 artists reflecting on the current state of democracy. The exhibit features 42 print pieces, including the designs of five artists from Philly's Brandywine Workshop and Archives.

In addition to opportunities to view the works, the Rittenhouse Square nonprofit gallery offers many public programs, including conversations with the artists, public tours and extended hours in June.

Don't miss: An interactive printing event on Saturday, July 11, 2026

Know before you go: Admission to the gallery is free.

Where: The Print Center, 1614 Latimer Street, Philadelphia, PA

...

Full article: All New for 2026: The Greatest Exhibitions in Greater Philadelphia