

96th ANNUAL

John Joyce

Donavon
Smallwood

Vikesh
Kapoor

Solo Exhibitions

The Print Center
96th ANNUAL International
Solo Exhibitions

January 21 – March 12, 2022

John Joyce: Jab, Cross, Hook

Vikesh Kapoor:
See You at Home

Donavon Smallwood: Languor / Beebe

96th ANNUAL Solo Shows

The Print Center is pleased to present solo exhibitions of new and recent work by John Joyce (Collingswood, NJ), Vikesh Kapoor (Los Angeles, CA) and Donavon Smallwood (New York, NY) selected from 537 international applicants to our 96th ANNUAL International Competition. The esteemed jurors were Ana Casas Broda and Dr. Kelli Morgan. Casas Broda is an artist, educator, editor and co-director of Hydra + Fotografía, a Mexico City-based platform for projects related to the medium of photography, founded in 2012. Dr. Morgan is an independent curator, social justice activist and Professor and Director of Curatorial Studies, Tufts University, Medford, MA, who developed a love of print when she curated A Collaborative Language: Selections from the Experimental Printmaking Institute (EPI) at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, Philadelphia, in 2017.

We are thrilled to welcome the three 96th ANNUAL Solo Exhibition Award winners into our galleries. As always, it is a pleasure to see what themes rise to the top among Finalists. This year, each of the artists, all of whom happen to be photographers, is dedicated in some way to portraiture. Their work offers poignant commentary on issues around identity, which are at the forefront of critical dialogues today.

— Dr. Ksenia Nouril, Jensen Bryan Curator

Judith "La Peligrosa" Rodriguez, Boxer, Mexico City, 2020, from the series "Gimnasio Nuevo Jordan," platinum palladium print, image 2 1/4" x 2 1/4" on sheet 9" x 6"; Fernando de Jesús Meza Guzmán, Boxer, Mexico City, 2020, from the series "Gimnasio Nuevo Jordan," platinum palladium print, image 2 1/4" x 2 1/4" on sheet 9" x 6"

John Joyce: Jab, Cross, Hook

For the photographer John Joyce, form and content go hand in hand. His intimate platinum palladium portraits are as technically adept as they are conceptually rigorous. The works in Jab, Cross, Hook are drawn from three series: "Gimnasio Nuevo Jordan," "Philadelphia" and "Mexican Portraits." Eight works from "Gimnasio Nuevo Jordan" appear matted and framed, designed for final presentation by the artist. Across the gallery, selections from all three series are presented unframed and, in some cases, unmatted. By stripping the works of their final armatures, this exhibition unveils the intricacies of Joyce's analog process, revealing the painterly – almost playful – brushstrokes of emulsion on the paper. This emulsion is more than a substrate. It is the foundation at the core of each, often stoic, portrait.

"Gimnasio Nuevo Jordan" began over five years ago, when Joyce himself started training at a gym in Mexico City. "What immediately struck me was the camaraderie among the boxers and their trainers as well as the families and friends who would accompany them to watch. Although closely integrated . . . this tightknit community welcomed me and my camera," says Joyce. The gym, which has produced a number of champion fighters, is more than just a training ground. It is a second home for these men – and occasionally women. Through subsequent visits to the gym, Joyce has followed the careers of a number of boxers, some of which have sadly ended in death.

Each portrait is taken in ambient light after a boxer has finished training. The title of the exhibition – Jab, Cross, Hook – refers directly to types of punches. “Rather than photographing the boxers in motion, I use these moments of exhausted repose to portray their dedication to the honing of their bodies and craft, and their dignity in the pursuit of glory and social ascendancy despite the slim chance of attainment,” says Joyce. The artist employs similar parameters in his series titled “Philadelphia,” also portraits of boxers, as well as in the series “Mexican Portraits,” comprised of recent portraits taken in Mexico.

About the Artist

John Joyce (lives Collingswood, NJ) is skilled in numerous traditional, non-silver processes including gum bichromate, cyanotype, anthotype and platinum palladium – for which he is best known. An analog aficionado, he uses medium format film to make contact prints that are intricate in detail. Joyce has photographed around the world, in such far-flung locales as Cuba, Egypt, Mexico, Morocco, Peru, Syria and Turkey, as well as for decades in the Pine Barrens of his home state of New Jersey. His long-term project “Gimnasio Nuevo Jordan” was a LensCulture Portrait Awards 2021 Finalist. His works are held in the private collections of renowned artist Ann Hamilton and the Mexican collector Pedro Slim. Joyce is represented by The Print Center’s Gallery Store.

Our Childhood Swimming Pool, 2016, from the series "See you at Home," pigment print, 16" x 24"

At Fox's Restaurant, 2017, from the series "See You at Home," pigment print, 16" x 24"

Vikesh Kapoor: See You at Home

Vikesh Kapoor's ongoing series "See You at Home" is, in the artist's own words, "a personal narrative that centers on family, memory and the myth and melancholy surrounding the American Dream." It revolves around his parents, Shailendra and Sarla Kapoor, who emigrated from India to the United States in the early 1970s. They built their new lives – their family of four and their careers as physicians – in a small, rural Pennsylvania town of about 10,000 people, where they were one of just a few immigrant families. The town was, and remains, predominantly white and conservative. The Kapoors, now retired and growing older are becoming increasingly isolated as their children have moved far from home.

Kapoor turns his lens on his parents, photographing them in and around their home, capturing some of the most intimate – if not banal – moments of their everyday lives: his mother sits at a booth in a diner, his father stands in their empty pool. Kapoor's interest in his family's history began fifteen years ago, while traveling to India with his father. "Questions of family, identity and personal history were born out of that trip and continue to inform my work today," he says.

The contemporary photographs in this series are paired, often side-by-side, with snapshots from his parent's family albums amassed over the course of many years and great distances. Kapoor sutures images across space and time, creating dialogues between them. The series reflects upon the slow but steady passage of time and the process of "becoming" that one experiences whenever fashioning a new identity.

About the Artist

Vikesh Kapoor (born Sunset Pines, PA; lives Los Angeles, CA) is a multidisciplinary artist whose work examines race, class and identity as a first-generation American. Kapoor has exhibited his series “See You at Home” in solo exhibitions at Filter Space, Chicago, IL and the New Orleans Photo Alliance Gallery, LA. He has been included in group exhibitions at the Houston Center for Photography, TX; Aperture Foundation, New York, NY; Silver Eye Center for Photography, Pittsburgh, PA; and SF Camerawork, San Francisco, CA, among other venues.

He has received numerous awards, including The Joan Hohlt and Roger Wich Emerging Photographer Scholarship from the Houston Center for Photography, The Hopper Prize, LensCulture Art Photography Juror’s Pick Award, PhotoNola Review Grand Prize and a Project Development Grant from CENTER, Santa Fe, NM. He has been a finalist for the Documentary Essay Prize from the Center for Documentary Studies at Duke University; PHmuseum Mobile Photography Prize; and Portrait Award from the Head On Photo Festival, Sydney, Australia as well as a semifinalist for the Smithsonian National Portrait Gallery’s triennial Outwin Boochever Portrait Competition. He was a resident at the Center of Photography at Woodstock, NY and Latitude Chicago. In 2021, he produced the Leica x 1854 Witnesses of: Devotion commission for the British Journal of Photography.

Untitled, 2020, from the series “Languor,” inkjet print, 20” x 16”; Untitled, 2020, from the series “Languor,” inkjet print, 24” x 20”

Donavon Smallwood: Languor / Beebe

This exhibition brings together photographs from two major bodies of work by Donavon Smallwood: “Languor,” which was recently published as the artist’s first monograph; and “Beebe,” a new project in the early stages of development. This is the first exhibition of “Beebe.”

Smallwood, a self-taught photographer, has been recently recognized for “Languor,” which was shot in Central Park, New York during the pandemic. The series comprises black-and-white portraits alongside closely cropped landscape images. A life-long resident of Harlem, Smallwood turned to the park as a refuge in the difficult days of lockdown and isolation due to COVID. However, it was not the bucolic landscape that drew his attention in the park, but the people within it – both neighbors and passersby. His subjects were cast directly from those in the park or via online postings on Craigslist and Facebook. Although his medium-format camera might have intimidated some, Smallwood relaxed his subjects by sitting with them for some time while photographing. It was important for the sitters to feel comfortable – at home. “Its [“Languor’s”] subject is what it's like to be a Black person in nature," says Smallwood. Picturing Black people in this context references the history of Seneca Village, a 19th century Black community at the heart of what is now Central Park. "Languor" is influenced by that history as well as the artist's own interest in the Romantic poet and artist William Blake, who is known for his transcendental works.

Smallwood more pointedly explores the notion of home in his new series "Beebe." It is sited at the ruins of Beebe Chapel – a Methodist church, originally located behind his grandmother's house in the town of Washington on the coast of North Carolina. The artist considers this location to be the genesis of the paternal side of his family. Thus, the series is a family portrait, capturing the people, places and things still inhabiting this auratic land today.

About the Artist

Donavon Smallwood (lives New York, NY) received his BA from Hunter College, New York. He has had a solo exhibition at the Baxter St Camera Club of New York and has exhibited in group exhibitions nationally and internationally. He is the recipient of numerous awards, including the 2021 Aperture Portfolio Prize and the 2021 Daylight Photo Award. His editorial photographs have been published in Aperture, The Atlantic, FT Weekend, The New York Times and The New Yorker. Languor, his first monograph, was released by Trespasser (Austin, TX) in November 2021.

Programs

Closing Receptions

Saturday, March 12, 3 – 6pm

Registration required*

Gallery tours will be recorded and available at www.printcenter.org

Artist Talks (all 6pm on Zoom*)

The artists will discuss the works in the exhibition and their artistic practices.

January 27: Vikesh Kapoor

February 10: Donavon Smallwood

March 3: John Joyce

* Register at www.printcenter.org. Visitor information may change with shifting COVID-19 conditions. Please visit our website for up-to-date information.

All of The Print Center's exhibitions and programs are free and open to the public.

THE PRINT CENTER 96TH ANNUAL

About the ANNUAL International Competition

The ANNUAL is one of the oldest and most prestigious competitions in the United States, which is juried each year by distinguished colleagues in the fields of photography, printmaking, book arts and contemporary art. Artists who use printmaking and/or photography as critical components of their work, or whose work pushes the boundaries of traditional photographic and printmaking practices, are encouraged to enter. The ANNUAL's focus reflects The Print Center's interest in the use of photography and printmaking in intriguing and expansive ways, both in content and in process.

Awards and Prizes for the ANNUAL include three prestigious museum purchase awards: the Art Museum of West Virginia University Purchase Award, Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts Purchase Award and Stinnett Philadelphia Museum of Art Collection Award. Additional recognitions include the Awagami Paper Award, BOMB Magazine Award, Callan/McNamara Award, Fireball Printing Award, Fish/Pearce Award, Olcott Family Award, The Photo Review Award, The Print Center Gallery Store Award, The Print Center Honorary Council Award, Renaissance Graphic Arts Award, Society for Photographic Education Award, Stockbridge Fine Art Print Award and the Jacqueline L. Zemel Prize for Printmaking.

Finalists

Caleb Cole
Raymond Grubb
Rod Jones
John Joyce
Vikesh Kapoor
Dora Lisa Rosenbaum
Donavon Smallwood
Heather Evans Smith
Peggy Washburn
Bingqin Zhang

Semifinalists

Liz Albert
Patty Carroll
Jo Ann Chaus
Alexis Childress
Tony Chirinos
Cathy Cone
Helen Maurene Cooper
Anastasia Davis
Hossein Fardinfard
April Flanders
Anna Garner
Helen Glazer
Claudia Ruiz Gustafson
Lali Khalid
Tarah Krajnak
Dominic Lippillo
Eric Lubrick
Fabiola Menchelli
Hannah Norton
Jennifer Pepper
Jennifer Mckinnon Richman
Aline Smithson
Tamara Staples
Aurelia Wrenn
Jaclyn Wright

About The Print Center

Founded in 1915, The Print Center encourages the growth and understanding of photography and printmaking as vital contemporary arts through exhibitions, publications and educational programs. The Print Center has an international voice and a strong sense of local purpose. Free and open to the public, it presents temporary exhibitions which highlight established and emerging, local, national and international contemporary artists. It mounts one of the oldest art competitions in the country, now in its 96th year and its Gallery Store offers the largest selection of contemporary prints and photographs available for sale in Philadelphia, as well as online. The Artists-in-Schools Program brings arts education to 600 Philadelphia public high schools students each year.

Funders

Support for The Print Center is offered by: Bryn Mawr Trust; Dolfinger-McMahon Foundation; Forman Family Fund; Sheila Fortune Foundation; Fund for Children; Allen Hilles Fund; Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Foundation; Christopher Ludwick Foundation; The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation; National Endowment for the Arts; William Penn Foundation; Pennsylvania Council on the Arts; The Pew Center for Arts & Heritage; Philadelphia Cultural Fund; The Philadelphia Foundation; Rosenlund Family Foundation; Michael Shannon Designs; University of the Arts; University of Pennsylvania Office of Government and Community Affairs; Henrietta Tower Wurts Memorial; and our Board of Governors, Luminaries, members and friends.

Notes

THE PRINT CENTER 96TH ANNUAL

1614 Latimer Street
Philadelphia, PA 19103
215.735.6090
info@printcenter.org
www.printcenter.org

Free and open to the public
Tuesday — Saturday, 11am – 6pm

 /printcenterphilly
 @ThePrintCenter
 @ThePrintCenter